

The International Rainwater Harvesting Alliance (IRHA)
&
The Watershed Organisation Trust (WOTR)

Are jointly organizing a training on

Rainwater Harvesting in the Heart of the Micro-Farming and Food Security in Watershed Development Programmes

MAIN OBJECTIVE

Enlarging the number of professionals involve in the development process, ready to start implementation of rainwater harvesting projects for improved food security.

TARGETED PUBLIC

- Local and medium national level politicians al and administrative authorities;
- Representatives of grassroots non-governmental organizations with reliable track-record;
- Other NGO leaders or local level water managers.

METHODOLOGY

Teaching will be done through alternating the theory of Watershed Development process with easily replicable techniques from implemented projects.

VENUE

Classroom sessions and field visits to water projects will take place in India, state of Maharashtra, at WOTR's training centre Darewadi.

EXPECTED RESULTS

- Participants will be able (in the beginning, with tutoring) to formulate and survey similar programmes
- The participants' knowledge and awareness of the importance of RWH and its importance are increased.
- The participant's personal and professional networks and contacts are enlarged.

PRACTICAL INFORMATION

Please follow the information on the IRHA's site www.irha-h2o.org

The participants will be picked up from the Mumbai airport on the 17 October 2010. The training will finish 9 days later, in Mumbai, when the participants will be seen off at the airport.

The training fee is fixed at 690 US$ per person. This includes the following services:

- Travel, accommodation and meal costs in India from 18 to 27 October 2010
- Training costs
- Material used and distributed.

The cost above does not include the expenses for visa, international flight and pocket money.

The sponsorship offers 2 full scholarships and WOTR 2 Boarding and Tuition supports for participants from Rwanda.

CERTIFICATION

Each participant will receive a certificate at the end of the workshop.

SPONSORING

