

CORD ANNOUNCES CHINMAYA GRAMIN SEVAK PRASHIKSHAN

A big opportunity for rural youth to make a career in rural development

CORD would like to upscale its comprehensive integrated rural development work in remote rural areas of the country based on its 27 years of enriched and established work and learning in 550 villages of Himachal Pradesh and another 160 villages in its newer sites at Odisha and Tamilnadu(www.cord.org.in). CORD envisages selecting certain Panchyats for holistic development in the remote areas of the country from different districts and states. It plans to work intensively in the Panchyat selected for five to six years before expanding further.

To ensure people driven grass root transformation, CORD is looking out for inspired people from remote and backward districts of the country with leadership quality, willing to live and work in one of the Panchyats of his/her area and serve with their hands and heart. It could even be the village and Panchyat where he/she lives if it happens to fit in to CORD's criteria of the Panchyat to be selected in the backward district.

Candidates with sound body and mind between 20 to 40 of years of age with graduation\post graduation are preferred (though candidates with 10+2 who have the right acumen for community development will be considered as a special case).Selected candidates will undergo training under CORD's Chinmaya Gramin Sevak Prashikshan.

Venue of training will be CORD Training Centre, Sidhbari, district Kangra, Himachal Pradesh.

It will be free, full time, one year residential course in Hindi with commitment to serve and work for CORD as full time paid employee in the remote rural district to which the candidate belongs on successful completion of the course.

Candidates are directed to apply with their resume and a brief note about their life's goals and aspirations to cordrecruit@gmail.com or at the address below now as the process of short listing candidates for interview has begun .CORD will begun the course with 20- 30 candidates with the right aptitude and attitude by April- May 2013.
